A note from your teacher...

My first and foremost goal in teaching music is to inspire a love, appreciation, and hopefully a passion for music and its incredible power to bring people together. I enjoy helping students comprehend the “why’s” of music through theory and history, and love seeing the joy and emotion from students when they find a piece of music that inspires them. The most rewarding part of teaching is witnessing the excitement and sense of accomplishment in the students as they reach their musical goals.

About the teacher...

Andrea Crisalli is a classically trained opera singer who recently moved from Los Angeles to Nashville to get in touch with her country side! She graduated from the University of Southern California with a BM in Vocal Arts in May of 2011. Over the past summer she attended the OperaWorks Advanced Artist Program at California State University, Northridge where she participated in a number of master classes and premiered the role of Andrea in the three act opera, Zombie Apoco-Lips. She has played a variety of roles including Cherubino in the 2011 USC Opera Scenes and Ariel in the world premiere of Snow White Turns 60 by Dale Trumbore through the USC Chamber Opera. Though Andrea has a passion for opera, she loves singing anything from Broadway to jazz to rock. Andrea is now pursuing a country/pop career here in Nashville. She is currently recording her demo CD and learning more about the Nashville songwriting craft.
